The city of Cork is under the same rules, and in murders, cases of larceny, arson nor assault, but if anyone dares to lift his voice against the unjust system of government he goes to jail.

The power to suspend jury trial is used unsparingly by English authorities. Secretary Wyndham, having been admitted to the Cabinet, is now the chief power over Irish affairs. The Lord Lieutenant has become practically the servant of his department. For this reason Secretary Wyndham is charged in the use of the power conferred by the Ohio. The people are contented to leave well enough

There is another question which must be settled, and that is the problem of the higher education of the people. This problem is a difficult one, because it involves some religious strife. Ireland is, for all practical puposes, a Roman Catholic country. Yet this creed has many grievances as to educational dictation. When England took over the government of the country by the enforced union of 1801 it would seem that such a step would have been taken with the SETTLEMENT OF THE LAND QUESTION assumption of some regard for Irish ideas.

Fifty years ago today St. Joseph's Infirmary was established by the Sisters of Nazereth. Originally it was a large building, considering the size of Louisville in 1852, but it has kept pace with the growth of the city and now occupies more than four times the space of the original institution. It is estimated that ary is Sister Aurea, formerly Miss O'Brien, a native of the city of Cork, Ireland. Sister Aurea has been at St. Joseph's Infirmary during the past thirty-two years, and during the last seventeen years she has officiated as Mother Superior. The infirmary was ready for occupancy on November 29, 1852. The first patient and Dr. Erasmus D. Foree. From that time on St. Joseph's Infirmary has never been without patients and nearly always it is crowded to its utmost capacity. During the civil war many of the most distinguished army officers in the Union army were under the care of the Sisters of Charity at this noble institution.

In its early days there were many physicions who gladly gave their services to the infirmary. Some of these good men are still living. Among them are Drs. J. C. Metcalfe, William Cheatham, John Goodman, George W. Griffiths and W. G. Ronald. During the war the infirmary had but fifteen large rooms. Thirty years after its establishment the south wing was built. A few years ago it became necessary to enlarge the institution and the north wing was erected. As it stands now the north wing is the surgical department and the south wing is the medical department. About 200 patients are accommodated. As fast as one patient is discharge another is always waiting for the place. The handsome chapel will seat eighty persons. It has a beautiful marble altar, the gift of former patients. electric lights and bells, steam heat and all modern appliances. St. Joseph's has a reputation not only in the city and State, but throughout the nation. Several of our most distinguished lawyers and statesmen have been at one time or other inmates of this famous institution and all are loud in praise of the attention and care they received.

The good Sisters desire to have it made known that hereafter the entrance for visitors will be at the center instead of the north wing.

Too late for publication in this issue a feeling letter commending the Christian work of the good Sisters was received from a well known priest who has been under their care for some time past. His letter will be published in the Kentucky Irish American next week.

ST. CECILIA'S DAY.

The feast day of St. Cecilia according to the calender of the Catholic church fell on last Sunday. The day was appropriately celebrated at St. Cecilia's church. The pastor, Rev. Father Brady, made extra exertions to have good music both at the late mass and at vespers in the afternoon, Rev. Father Dominic Crane preached the morning sermon. Rev. Father O. P. Ackerman preached the sermon after vespers. Among the priests who attended the celebration were Fathers Kalaher, Cronin and Sheridan. Large congregations were present at both services.

HELP THE POOR.

The chilly air of the past week has caused a hustle for warmer clothing and providing for a little heat in the house, as a preparation for approaching wintry weather. And the charitably inclined will not forget the poor, whom we have always with us, who will need assistance to protect them from suffering. They must have food, clothing, fuel, and depend for it on the charity of their more fortunate fellow-creatures. The charity organizations will now prepare for their work. Those who can should join them to increase their efficiencythe men in St. Vincent's, the women in St. Joseph's Aid or some such association. days, But, alas, they will never come more, When life seemed as bright as the sun's golden rays,

As I played around the old cabin door Well I remember the little school-house That stood near the old water-mill,

And Sandy, the miller, in his old worn Who would give me his old pipe to fill. Many a story to us boys he would tell Of the wonders he'd seen in his youth,

The wise look on his face, I remember it well. As he'd solemnly vouch for their truth.

What sport I would have on St. Stephen's When I'd join in the hunt for the wren,

And at eve hurry home, nor stop on the For mother would look for me then.

Were Kept Busy Receiving Money in Division 4 Wednesday.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather a large crowd attended the meeting of Division 4, A. O. H., last Wednesday night. President John H. Hennessy presided. Secretaries Joe McGinn and Dave Reilly were kept busy receiving money. James Keanealey brought the good news that all the members were off the sick list but Pat Flynn and Eugene Sullivan. Pat Mulloy and will Reilly were reported as entirely recovered. The following new members were elected: James O'Connor, John Mangan, Dennis Gleason and William Coyne. A great Of this life! and when from it he must welcome was given Pat Burke. It was his first appearance at a meeting in a great while. HINTS ON STYLE.

Velveteen is used with zibeline instead of cloth if you like, but they are both in the same shade. The yoke skirt is one of the most popular modes, the yoke fitting the hips as closely and carefully as possible. Ostrich feathers, one at either side, the ends falling over the hair, are very pretty, and wings, too, are arranged very nicely to fall over the hair a bit.

Among the new trimmings are the handsome and expensive jets, very light tints than steel.

Ermine shows up at its best in some of the white cloth gowns trimmed with heavy lace. It is variously distributed in bands, collars and cuffs, while in facing for dressy coats it is especially effective.

Persian lamb and broadtail are both used for trimming colored cloth gowns, and white broadtail is popular for vests, collars and cuffs. Squirrel finds many uses as a trimming, and as the season advances fur trimmings of all kinds will be more and more in evidence.

The popularity of gray is established beyond a doubt for this season, and every tint between the palest and the darkest shade is brought out in the new costumes, both in hairy cloths and dainty chiffons. It is a complete sequence in gray with gray gowns, gray hats and gray furs.

The black lace gowns over white are also quite as popular as ever, black tulle inset with black lace being one favorite. This sort of gown requires at least two foundation skirts of white chiffon. Or you may reverse the order and have white chiffon gown with insettings of black lace.

Dressy gowns are more complicated than ever-and most gowns are n less dressy-in combinations of mat trimmings and intricate hand work. To net, iace and velvet, combined most

Perforated cloth embroidered in silk of the same color is one variation in embroidered effects, which in palest pink and blue changeable silk is very effective in combination with the plain cloth. The perforated cloth is used for the bodice and voke on the skirt, which

It may be repeated again and again that the embroideries are without parallel both as to variety and elegance, and yet many of them seem to have been inspired by the special kinds which were in fashion when Watteau painted his picture of women in stomachers and

The Paquin skirt, with moderate fulness and plaits all around the hips, comes up for consideration wherever the subject of how to have your skirt made is discussed. A TALE WITH A MORAL
